- Micro camper Habiton by Bürstner concept vehicle based on a Renault Kangoo
- Inflatable roof tent with a hardtop integrated into the vehicle silhouette
- "Wohnfühlen" home from home design for urban, young and style-conscious target groups
- Sustainable elements and various modular options for different uses

Düsseldorf. With the prototype HABITON, the renowned motorhome and caravan manufacturer Bürstner presents a vehicle that will make the hearts of young singles, couples and families who lead an urban lifestyle skip a beat or two.

"The micro camper concept vehicle HABITON is a prime example for the stylish new kind of camper that is suitable for the everyday urban life of our style-conscious target group and at the same time meets the strong trend towards flexibility and freedom," says chairman of the Bürstner management board Jens Kromer.

Based on the popular Renault Kangoo, the concept vehicle impresses with its high level of suitability for everyday use and a well-thought-out modular concept. The vehicle fits into any multi-storey car park, but also makes no compromises when it comes to camping comfort and follows the latest design trends.

The "Wohnfühlen" home from home feel is unparalleled and extremely typical for Bürstner - like previous concept vehicles, the HABITON also follows the maxim of "Travel small, live large", and scores with numerous outstanding comfort features.

The wow factor is provided by an inflatable roof tent that is fully integrated into the vehicle silhouette thanks to a hardtop. With its modern design and the practical overall height of less than two metres, the HABITON is the perfect choice for the city and fits into any multi-storey car park.

Despite its compact size, the vehicle feels comfortable and spacious, whether its occupants are sitting down or in bed, thanks to the largest possible size of bed in the roof tent and inside the vehicle.

In terms of the feel of the space, the vehicle impresses with a modular concept - quickly adding or removing the respective modules makes it easy to switch from everyday life to camping, and vice versa. These include, for example, a removable kitchen unit including induction hob and sink, an inflatable mattress for the vehicle inside and an electric cool box. The lounge tent on the vehicle rear creates a full camping solution.

The trendy colour yellow and flexible features such as blackout elements attached with snap fasteners that can be used as bags during the day, air vents with fly screens, dimmable LED spots, hook-on baskets and an additional battery solution emphasise the trendy and modular character of this unique micro camper.

The HABITON BY BÜRSTNER highlights the trend toward sustainable leisure activities and travel.

The unique concept vehicle HABITON BY BÜRSTNER can be experienced live in Hall 6 at the Caravan Salon in Düsseldorf from 25 August to 3 September 2023.
